

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention discloses a differential audio device applicable to notebook computers. The device uses differential signal characters to improve the audio signal quality and its transmission distance. The device contains at least an audio controller to output audio signals, a single-ended signal to differential signal converter to convert audio signals into differential signals, a differential signal to single-ended signal converter to convert differential signals into audio signals for output.